

Yes, the Global Methodist Church (GMC) is considered an evangelical Christian church, rooted in traditional Wesleyan theology but emphasizing core evangelical tenets like making disciples, evangelism, biblical authority, and traditional views on marriage, positioning itself as a more conservative alternative to the United Methodist Church (UMC) from which it split.

Key Characteristics:

- Wesleyan Roots: The GMC maintains a strong connection to John Wesley's teachings, emphasizing scriptural holiness and personal transformation.
- Evangelical Focus: Its mission centers on making disciples, church planting, and bold evangelism, aligning with evangelical priorities.
- Conservative Stance: It upholds traditional Christian teachings, particularly on marriage and ordination, differing from the more liberal stances within the UMC.,.
- Biblical Authority: The GMC prioritizes Scripture as the primary authority, fitting within broader evangelical traditions.

In essence, the Global Methodist Church is an evangelical expression of Methodism, embracing core evangelical beliefs while staying true to its Wesleyan heritage, notes Christianity Today and Wikipedia.